INTRODUCTION

This catalogue is designed to fulfill a popular demand for concise information pertaining to the locations of all the known caves in the state. It is intended to supplement and correct information contained in the recently published volume on the Caves of Missouri by J Harlen Bretz, Missouri Geological Survey and Water Resources vol. 39, 2d ser., 1956 and to replace the Partial Catalog of Caves in Missouri published in March 1952.

The caves are listed alphabetically according to the counties in which they are located. The location of each cave is given within the limits of accuracy of the best available information, and if a cave location is designated on a published map it is so indicated by having an asterix (*) appended to the name of the quadrangle map which is listed after each cave location. Under the Remarks column, the dimensions of the cave entrances are given whenever possible for purposes of identification. Thus the notation (Ent. W. 30', H. 20') indicates that the entrance of a given cave is 30 feet wide and 20 feet high. If a cave is privately owned and operated as commercial venture, the cave name is underscored and the term Commercial appears in the Remarks column. If a cave is located in a State Park and under the management of the State Park Board, it is so indicated in the Remarks column. Some caves are marked as closed to public if it is known that an owner refuses entry without prior permission. Other pertinent information for identification or accessibility is also given in the Remarks column.

This catalogue is in reality only an interim report because the information which it contains is admittedly incomplete and subject to constant change as new and more accurate information is received. For example, since the publication of the Caves of Missouri in 1956, 148 new cave names have been added to the total number of known caves in the state, and two more counties have been added to the list of counties containing known caves. There are now 57 counties in the state that together contain a total of 686 known caves (Table 1). By comparison, the 1952 Partial Catalog of Caves in Missouri contained the names and locations of only 210 caves distributed among 40 counties. In view of the above, the Missouri Geological Survey wishes to solicit the assistance of all interested users of this catalogue in adding to or correcting the information which it contains. Because descriptive locations are often inadequate, it is more desirable and accurate to give additive or corrective information in terms of government land descriptions, such as fractional section, township, and range. A quadrangle map of almost any given area of the state may be obtained for thirty cents each from the Missouri Geological Survey upon written request.

It has taken the combined efforts of several members of the Survey staff over a period of years to gather the information contained in this catalogue. The basic list was compiled from the studies of Willard Farrar and published after his death in World War II as the Partial Catalog of Caves in Missouri. The inaccuracies and inadequateness of this list were fully acknowledged at the time of its publication, and the list was regarded only as an interim report on the field work initiated in the autumn of 1947 by J Harlen Bretz. Although the results of Dr. Bretz's work were finally published in 1956 as an exhaustive treatise on the caves of Missouri, it soon became apparent shortly after the book appeared that a concise list of the caves and their locations would be useful supplement to his work. To fulfill this requirement, Mrs. D'Jeanne Stevens checked old correspondence, maps, and lists for location inaccuracies, and Mr. Jerry Vineyard checked hundreds of cave locations in the field. Meanwhile, many helpful suggestions were received from active members of the Missouri Speleological Society and the Missouri School of Mines and Metallurgy Spelunkers Club. Miss Bonnie L. Wills compiled the work of Stevens and Vineyard into a composite list and typed the manuscript, and final checking and editing was done by John W. Koenig. Despite the conscientious efforts of all these people, this list is still considered to be incomplete and in many instances inaccurate because it is an unending task to find and accurately locate the hundreds of caves within the state.
